

ADAM TUFFREY

Adam Tuffrey is an up and coming writer/ musical director, based in East Acton, London. A recent emphasis on his commercial writing has seen him release 5 singles, across the last 2 years, with unwavering success, as features on BBC Introducing and gigs at reputable London venues (such as The Spice of Life, The Bedford and Ronnie Scott's) prove. Adam has also worked on, arranged and directed a number of semi professional/ amateur productions and pantomimes since leaving school and pursuing a career in the industry.

Credits include: BBC Breakfast; Meridian (ITV); "Music 4 Meningitis" (Bournemouth/ Weymouth Pavilion & BIC); "Guys & Dolls" (The Lighthouse Theatre); "Little Shop of Horrors" (Regent Centre, Christchurch); "All Shook Up" (The Barrington Theatre); "Back In Time For Christmas" (Bournemouth Pavilion); "An evening with Adam Tuffrey" (Pier Approach Theatre, Bournemouth)

Adam's journey includes a nearly fatal encounter with bacterial meningitis. His recovery inspired him to work with Meningitis Now, a charity for which he has, to date, raised over £50,000. In the process he earned the British Empire Medal from the Queen on her 2014 Birthday Honour's list and got to meet the Monarch at Buckingham Palace. Appearances on chat shows and national TV followed as well as a gig at St James Palace. Adam was a nominee for the Pride Of Britain Awards in the same year.

Adam is now working on material for other artists (often collaborating with some of London's finest young talents) and is very excited to be working on a brand new musical, set to be workshopped later in 2019.
